DECISION

NUTRI-ASIA, INC.<sup>1</sup> ("Opposer") filed a Verified Notice of Opposition to Trademark Application No. 4-2011-012970. The contested application, filed by GREEN GOLD GOURMET FOODS, INCORPORATED<sup>2</sup> ("Respondent-Applicant"), covers the mark MR. PINAKURAT GAYUMA (LABEL MARK) for use on "condiments, sauces, spices" under Class 30 of the International Classification of goods<sup>3</sup>.

The Opposer anchors its opposition on Section 123.1 (j) of Republic Act No. 8293 or the Intellectual Property Code of the Philippines ("IP Code"). According to the Opposer, "Pinakurat" is a descriptive term and is thus not entitled to trademark protection. Further, the Opposer alleges, among other things, that:

"1. Pinakurat indicates that the condiments, sauces and spices on which it is used have a "shocking" or "surprising" characteristic.

"2. Pinakurat indicates that the condiments, sauces and spices on which it is used have a taste similar to the dish pinakurat."

In support of the opposition, the Opposer submitted the following pieces of evidence:

1. Certified true copy of the Articles of Merger between Nutri Asia, Inc. and Southeast Asia Food, Inc. (Exhibit "A");
2. Certified true copy of the Amended Articles of Incorporation of Nutri-Asia, Inc. (Exhibit "B");
3. Certified true copy of the Amended Articles of Incorporated of Southeast Asia Food, Inc. (Exhibit "C");
4. Judicial Affidavit of Lalaine Gonzales-Camiña (Exhibit "D");
5. Print out of Application No. 4-2010-500127 filed on 29 January 2010 for the trademark DATU PUTI PINOY KURAT SPICED TUBA VINEGAR AND

The Respondent-Applicant filed its Verified Answer on 03 June 2013, specifically denying the allegations stated in the Verified Opposition and averring the following special and affirmative defenses:

"1. The instant opposition is a mere re-hash of the issues brought forth by Opposer in IPC No. 14-2011-00084, and said issues, in fact, are irrelevant to the registration of the subject mark;

"2. Opposer is not a proper party to the instant opposition at all;

"3. Opposer is not entitled to use "Pinakurat" or any confusingly similar terms in its marks;

"4. The term "Pinakurat" is not descriptive of vinegar, sauces, condiments or spices;

"5. Even assuming arguendo that PINAKURAT is descriptive of vinegar, sauces, condiments and spices, it has already been imbued with secondary meaning and has become distinctively associated with Respondent-Applicant's products; and

"6. Opposer applied for the mark PINOY KURAT in bad faith."

The Respondent-Applicant's evidence consists of the following:

1. Certified true copy of the Certification from the Department of Trade and Industry dated 02 August 2011 (Exhibit "1");
2. Certified true copy of an article in Cook Magazine dated September 2002 (Exhibit "2");

And there seems to be no stopping its growing fame because it has not only become the must-have pasalubong from visitors of this city of waterfalls, but it is the most in demand padala to Filipinos abroad*" (Exhibit "22-a");

The case was scheduled for mediation conference on 26 July 2013. After it was declared a failure of mediation for refusal of the parties to mediate, the case was then after set for preliminary conference and the same was terminated on 28 January 2014. Both parties filed their respective position paper on 07 February 2014.

Should the Respondent-Applicant be allowed to register the mark MR. PINAKURAT GAYUMA (LABEL MARK)?

Sec. 123.1 (j) of R. A. No. 8293, relied upon by the Opposer, provides, in part, that a mark cannot be registered if it:

x x x

(j) Consists exclusively of signs or of indications that may serve in trade to designate the kind, quality, quantity, intended purpose, value, geographical origin, time or production of the goods or rendering of the services, or other characteristics of the goods or services.

The above-quoted provision expresses the prohibition on registration of what is known as descriptive mark. Aptly, a term is descriptive if, as understood in its normal and natural sense, it "forthwith conveys the characteristics, functions, qualities or ingredients or a product to one who has never seen it and does not know what it is," or "if it forthwith conveys an immediate idea of the ingredients, qualities or characteristics of the goods," or if it clearly denotes what goods or services are provided in such a way that the consumer does not have to exercise powers of perception or imagination.<sup>4</sup>

There is no dispute that the word PINAKURAT, which forms part of the Respondent-Applicant's mark, was derived from the Cebuano dialect "kurat". "Kurat", as translated in the application, means shocked, frightened or surprised. Thus, it is the Opposer's position that the use of the word PINAKURAT immediately signals to consumers that the food products which bear such mark have a "shocking" or "surprising" characteristic. According to the Opposer, as applied for condiments and sauces, the term suggests the characteristic of spiciness.<sup>5</sup>

The words "shocking" has been defined as something causing a feeling of surprise and dismay while "frightened" as to drive or force by arousing fear. These words characterize or express the feeling of a person. When applied to food items, these terms do not readily convey the characteristic, quality or ingredients of a product. Thus, the use of the word PINAKURAT for processed, dried/dehydrated and powdered meat, seafoods, fruits and vegetables; condiments, sauces, spices does not readily convey an immediate idea as to the ingredients or qualities of the products. As correctly pointed out by the Respondent-Applicant, it requires a certain degree of imagination and perception to establish a link between the term and the products on which it is used.

At most, the word PINAKURAT may considered merely as suggestive of the characteristic of the goods. Suggestive terms are those which, in the phraseology of one court, require "imagination, thought and perception to reach a conclusion as to the nature of the goods." Such terms, "which subtly connote something about the product," are eligible for protection in the absence of secondary meaning. While suggestive marks are capable of shedding "some light" upon certain characteristics of the goods or services in dispute, they nevertheless involve "an element of incongruity," "figurativeness," or "imaginative effort on the part of the observer."<sup>6</sup>

In this regard, this Bureau finds merit in the arguments raised by the Respondent-Applicant, to wit:<sup>7</sup>

"30. "PINAKURAT" does not immediately signal to consumers that the product has "shocking" or "surprising" characteristic. The word "PINAKURAT" is not even germane to Respondent-Applicant's vinegar, which can also be applied to its condiments, sauces and spices:

"There is no merit in [Opposer's] claim that the term "PINAKURAT" of the cited mark is a descriptive and generic term, which cannot become a dominant feature of the mark or be exclusively appropriated as a trademark. We concur with Examiner Salviejo that the cited etymology of the term "PINAKURAT" does not present itself to be a sufficient justification to conclude that the term is descriptive of the nature, quality, ingredients or other characteristics of the product "vinegar". A considerable degree of imagination and perception would still be needed to establish a link between the term used and the product it is emblazoned on. In fact, no such reasonable inference can be made from the term "pinakurat" to the product "vinegar".

Further, the presence of a Certificate of Registration in favor of the cited mark is sufficient to bar any other confusingly similar mark from registration, notwithstanding alleged objections made by the [Opposer] to its registrability.

"31. In the case of Societe Des Produits Nestle S. A. v. Court of Appeals, 356 SCRA 207 (2001), the Supreme Court differentiated descriptive terms from suggestive terms:

x x x

"32. Clearly, the term "PINAKURAT" is not descriptive of the goods, or their characteristics, it seeks to protect. Even the alleged meaning of "PINAKURAT" -- shocking or surprising -- are not common characteristics of the covered goods. At most, and this is already stretching the connotation of the word, "PINAKURAT" may be said to be suggestive of the characteristics of the goods. Even so, suggestive marks are registrable, as held in the Nestle case. Even as early as in the case of Ang v. Teodoro, 74 Phil 50, the Supreme Court held:

x x x

"33. Applying the foregoing in this case, "PINAKURAT" is never used adjectively to define or describe the goods, or their characteristics, rather, is merely suggestive of them. Thus, the term "PINAKURAT" need not be disclaimed, and was the proper subject of appropriation when the SUKA PINAKURAT mark was registered.

"34. Further, the admissions made by Opposer in the instant Opposition belie its claim that the word "PINAKURAT" is descriptive. Opposer relates the meaning of the word "KURAT" to spicy taste, or in Tagalog "anghang", contrary to its admission in paragraph 14 of the instant Opposition, Opposer claims that:

"The term pinakurat is an affixation of the Cebuano root word "kurat". It means "in a sudden or surprising manner as to shock the person."

"35. It is plainly and simply absurd to say that the term "PINAKURAT" immediately conveys the characteristics of the goods, when Opposer is also claiming that the meaning of the same term is "shocking" or "surprising".

"36. It may be that Opposer finds that Respondent-Applicant's goods have a surprising or shocking characteristic for being spicy or maanghang. Precisely, Opposer already spells out that the alleged characteristic of the products is their spiciness, and not their being surprising or shocking. In paragraph 18 of the instant Opposition, it admitted that "pinakurat's direct English or Tagalog translation is not spicy or pinaanghang. Indeed, Opposer admitted that it had to exercise powers of perception or imagination to connect the terms "shocking" or "surprising" to spiciness in taste which makes the mark PINAKURAT a suggestive mark rather than a descriptive mark.”

Accordingly, this Bureau finds that the Respondent-Applicant's trademark application as not falling within the definition of descriptive mark under Section 123.1 (j) of the IP Code.

WHEREFORE, premises considered, the instant opposition is hereby DISMISSED. Let the filewrapper of Trademark Application Serial No. 4-2011-012970 be returned, together with a copy of this Decision, to the Bureau of Trademarks for information and appropriate action.

SO ORDERED.
